

Call for Monthly Talks The Institute of Applied Information Security's Talks Series

The Institute of Applied Information Security (AIS) of Heriot-Watt University is delighted to invite industry leaders to talk to the Gulf and international security communities about their experience and interests in the field of information security. This series is co-organised with the British Computer Society (BCS).

The talks will be delivered using AdobeConnect and other online video communication tools, AIS will help you become familiar with the delivery tools if needed. If you are interested to be our speaker, please do contact Dr. Hani Ragab, the director of the institute, at h.ragabhassen@hw.ac.uk

About AIS

Heriot-Watt's security researchers and practitioners created the Institute of Applied Information Security (AIS) to address practical and real-life security challenges. We adopt a rigorous approach to provide dependable, optimized and innovative solutions.

Our mission is to:

- Provide out-of-the-box and vendor-independent approaches to solve real-life security challenges
- Inspire and contribute to national and international information security policies and standards
- Provide high-quality training to industrial and government partners
- Support our students and graduates throughout their academic and professional journeys

About Heriot-Watt

Founded in 1821 as the world's first mechanics institute, Heriot-Watt has a rich heritage and an established reputation as a leading research-led university. Now, our communities of scholars come from across the world and for a purpose: leaders in ideas and solutions, they deliver innovation and educational excellence in business, engineering, design and the physical, social and life sciences.

Working with leading academics, our students learn and thrive in our friendly community of campuses, with our partners and online. Our graduates are specialist, creative, professional and globally minded. With their research-informed education underpinned by the Heriot-Watt values, they develop character, leadership skills and social mobility, becoming professionally educated, globally employable, citizens of the world.

Our roots are in Scotland, our ambition and reach are truly international. A leader in transnational education, wherever we are, Heriot-Watt is a powerful driver and engine of the economy. Together with our alumni, civic community and industry partners, we transform people, society and the world we live in.
